Testing is recommended for both symptomatic and asymptomatic individuals. Testing is highly recommended for:
- People with symptoms of COVID-19.

- Anyone who has been in contact with someone who has a confirmed or possible case of COVID-19.

- Anyone who attended a public or private gathering of more than ten people who were not wearing face coverings or maintaining social distancing.

- Anyone planning to visit someone at high risk for COVID-19 illness, including people 65 years of age and older people with serious medical conditions.

A negative test does not mean you will remain negative after you have been tested. You may also test negative if your sample was tested early in your infection, and you may test positive later during your illness. If you were exposed to someone who is confirmed to have the virus that causes COVID-19, it is important to stay home and self-quarantine for 14 days from the last day you were potentially exposed.
